

The Spiraling Fall of Western Civilization

Isaiah Roman

Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? (Psalms 2:1)
This passage can be read two ways, depending upon your acceptance of the Christ, or rejection of Him. To a Christian Psalms 2 is a messianic prophecy. It is a declaration of God's establishment of the Christ, the Messiah as the one, true king of all creation. To the Jewish believer it is God's establishment of His king upon the throne in Zion.

But, the very first verse sets forth a quantification, a quid pro quo to the words that follow; the heathen rage, and the people imagining vain things. The heathen are the gentiles and the people are the children of Israel. The first time the Christ came, he came because of these two things. He came to save the world from itself, because it was raging against God, and God's own people were holding on to vain imaginings.

God did not do this for our sake, but for His own glory. He did this to show mankind, the heavenly hosts, and all of creation that He is righteous, He is just, and He is love. We have, throughout all time, sought power for ourselves. The very first sin of mankind was to seek the power of God. The one condition that remains true of all mankind is it's quest for power and control. God has, from the beginning of time, been trying to tell men that they were never created to have control, but rather were created to exercise God's control over all things. The created cannot be the creator.

At the time of the Christ's first appearance the Jews and the Romans crucified him together. On Monday Jesus rode into Jerusalem in triumph, to the adulation of the throng. By Friday he was dying on the cross, beaten and rejected. Why? Because the Romans were enraged by the actions of the people. They had dared to challenge Roman authority and to both pacify and mollify the crowd someone had to pay. The Jews had vain imaginations that the Christ would ride into Jerusalem, throw out the Roman authorities and establish the Kingdom of God on earth, with the Jews as it's most high governors. Jesus was challenging this authority, and someone had to pay.

Control. They all wanted control. But God did not come to set up an earthly kingdom. He had already established His rule "Yet I have set my king upon my holy hill of Zion." God had already set His king upon Zion; the Messiah, the Christ, Jesus. God had already established the governments and leaders. In the moment the high priest confronted Jesus, and Jesus confirmed to Caiaphas that he was indeed the Messiah, the Son of God, Caiaphas tore his clothes and ordered him to be taken to the Romans for crucifixion. Why? Because these men would not accept a role as paupers in Heaven. They would rather be princes in Hell.

When Satan tempted the Christ on the mountain, he made Him an offer; bow your knee to me and I will give you all of the kingdoms of earth. If Christ had bowed to Satan, the ownership of the kingdoms would belong to Satan, and they would be Satan's to distribute. If Satan had control over the kingdoms, then he would have the power to take and give those kingdoms at will. This would have been the fulfillment of Satan's proclamation that he would "exalt my throne above the stars of God; I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the North." (Isaiah 14:13)

Caiaphas had already bent his knee. The Romans had already bent their knee. One of the earthly reasons the Christ was crucified was because he threatened the power structure. The Romans had established the kingship, and priest hood of the Jews. The Jews bowed to the Romans, the Romans bowed to Satan. Christ bowed to no one, and for that he died on the cross. Why?

God raised Jesus on the third day to prove His glory, to show His grace, to show His righteousness, to show His love. "Behold the eye of Jehovah is to those who fear Him, on those who hope in His mercy." (Psalms 33:18) God shows mercy to those who have hope in Him alone, and justice towards those who rage against him with vain imaginings.

In our day we are repeating this error. As a people, we are once again raging against God, and imagining vain things. Once again those who seek control and power have bowed their knee to God's enemy in the hope that they will be given the kingdom. This time their enemy is the memory of the Christ, as it has been established within the history, the culture, and the people of "one nation, under God indivisible" so long as it maintains it's soul; the soul of the Christian, conjoined with the Spirit.

But, the forces of the enemy are at work, and have been at work for some time to break down the memory of the Christ. They are not working from without, but rather from within. The tragedy is that in order to accomplish these goals, they have to deny the very principles they seek to establish. They must destroy the moral character of this nation so that they can build it back up again in their image, their vain imagining of what it ought to be.

Decline of morality and downward spiral toward the moral destruction of civilization was threefold in its progress of degradation. There have been servants of Satan from time to time since Jesus walked the earth ministering the message, "the Kingdom of God is at hand" (Mark 1: 15).

In eighteenth century satanic forces became organized with an effort and intent to undermine Christianity and eradicate it through its leader Adam Weishaupt and the Illuminati (self-styled illuminated ones). From that historical background it began in earnest and progressed to Hegel and Kant's development of the philosophy of humanism, existentialism. It was given a boost by Freudian, schools of psychology followed by Jung, etc. It was aided greatly by John Dewey in the early 1900's when he began developing his concept of progressive education, having been influenced by the USSR model.

At about the same time a group of intellectuals were forming in Russia. Although their sole purpose was to understand how to establish global communism, they hesitated to use a name that directly referenced Communism. Instead they called themselves the "Institute for Social Research," a name that made the organization sound innocuous. They moved to Germany, to the city of Frankfurt and renamed it "The Frankfurt School." (This group moved its operations to Columbia University in New York City, USA still under the same name to escape the oppression of jewish intellectuals and scientists by Adolph Hitler, cir. 1932).

They developed a remarkably devious means of accomplishing their goal; divorce Marxism from "economics" and remarry it to "culture." By this means it would be easy to corrupt the culture that had built the western model of capitalism and destroy it. The group developed "Cultural Theory" based upon the early French existentialists ideal of defining social culture as the sole problem of all social ills in the world. They set about the process of using Cultural Theory to corrupt western society. If successful, it would put them in a position to attack western culture and conquer it.

They had learned from the Bolshevik revolution, the hard way, that the methods they had originally followed would not work in a modern industrial nation, especially a nation developed from Christian principles; the protestant work ethic, rewards for hard honest labor, respect for an individual's integrity and property rights. In such a society a man could, by hard work, provide an inheritance for his family and make life easier for them by providing them with security. Such a man did not need the state to provide for his well being. In fact, such a man would oppose the idea of such a state.

From this springboard an attack was launched on what they called "social ills." This attack was aimed specifically at the capitalists countries of the west, of which the United States was the greatest power rising at the time.

It was at about this time that Hitler began publishing his theory that the way to eliminate enemies of the state was to declare them "public health issues" not political. If a social issue became more than just a moral question; if it became an essential issue of life and health the argument could be completely transformed. Who could argue against good health? It was through this that Hitler was able to promote his "Pure Aryan Society" theory for Germany and the "Master Race."

The enemies of the West took a cue from this method. The feminist movement, the worker's union push, race equality, all became separate issues. The face of each issue was changed as the curses of these ills belonged to the western system of living and not issues of the moral culpability of individuals. The fact that black on black slavery and the Islamic practice of slavery in African countries is where black slavery began was shoved under the rug.

It makes one wonder why only in America is maltreatment of minorities and women a curse and nowhere else in the world? Women and in some instances children are virtual slaves in large parts of the world. There were black societies in Africa that built entire societies on sale of captured enemies taken in combat; but, that doesn't seem to be a matter of concern. Never mind that the "innocent" indigenous people of North and South America all practiced not only slavery, but cannibalism, sanctioned rape and torture. These problems became nothing compared to western culture's culpability for it's crimes against humanity.

Those do not fit the narrative of their agenda they brand as "politically incorrect." By redefining the terms of hatred, tolerance and justice they have managed to pursue their goal of bring the United States under socialism. Through dividing groups against each other they form the sort of class warfare that Marx demanded for socialist reform. When so many people are at odds with each other, a referee must step in and break things up. When government is the referee, it must make laws to preclude or control behavior. If you pick the circumstances under which those conflicts occur, and then control how those solutions are enacted, you can change anything you want, especially in a democratic society. It is the only way to bring down the world's only remaining super power. Break its back economically and break its entrepreneurial spirit.

The intent was to bring down capitalism and its bastions in the west. As the United States began to win the cold war principally under Ronald Reagan their "big guns" were trained on the USA. A new surge of social issues were used to fragment and create chaos along racial and cultural lines and divide and conquer the western world. They were able to demonize colonialism of western societies by claiming "neocons" were "neocolonial." Of course they ignored the fact that by treaty the United States turned their colonies back to the people (the Philippines are a prime example; Hawaii was made a state with full citizenship privileges). They ignored the fact that every presence of personnel the U.S. has in a foreign nation is there by treaty.

In order to achieve success Christianity must be marginalized, neutralized and ultimately eradicated to achieve complete success in their plan. For this reason the “Gospel of Jesus Christ” must be replaced by a “liberation gospel” of socialism. This was to falsify a theory that Jesus was a social reformer and the early Church were socialistic (Acts 4: 32). This gospel is the central focus of the teachings of Rev. Jeremiah Wright, the former pastor, mentor, and spiritual leader of President Obama. Rev. Wright received his degree in theology from Union Theological Seminary, one of the many organizations given the task of destroying American sovereignty by the Rothschilds and their minions.

Christianity claims, “Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and you shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free” (John 8:31).

Socialism, while professing utopian idealism and freedom, can not coexist with actual freedom of the individual; socialism must be the author of all social freedoms in order to control the masses. Neitzche realized that without a god, man must have an exterior imperative towards morality. Under a humanist, existentialist view we must “grow up” and move past social prescriptions if we are to be happy as humans. Removing the prescriptions of a god is necessary, but there must be a compelling force against the deeds of “social misfits.” God is replaced by government. In truth, God cannot be replaced, but He can be ignored. All you have to do is bow your knee to another, and the other will give you power over government.

What God promises he delivers; what socialists grant they may do away with as soon as it seems good to them. God is the provider; He is omnipotent therefore able to do so under any circumstance. Socialism must change with time place and the current reigning dictator in power; they are not gods with power to make certain the natural elements do their bidding. Thus, socialism reflects the character of it’s master.

This is that same Marxist movement that is at this moment working to take over the commerce and industry of the United States of America and bring it under world wide socialism and reduce it to third world status. Our current state is not new, nor is it novel. These forces have been at work in this nation for nearly one hundred and fifty years. They failed twice early on because of the vigilance, and heart of the American people and their leaders. They began to succeed in earnest when they managed to place some of their own within government, and then bought President Woodrow Wilson.

Part of this third thrust for control began with Behavioral modification which was developed in the early 1900’s and became employed in the mid 1900’s. Later it was shown that behavioral modification could not keep children in check. They needed to remove the source for the old system of values, but realized quickly that they still needed the values. From this came values clarification, an offspring of the political correctness philosophy.

“Political Correctness (PC) is the communal tyranny that erupted in the 1980s. It was a spontaneous declaration that particular ideas, expressions and behavior, which were then legal, should be forbidden by law, and people who transgressed should be punished. (see Newspeak, the name used in George Orwell's "1984" to describe the manipulation of language to prevent dissenting thoughts being expressed, is almost identical to Politically Correct speech. A fact that has not prevented this grotesque perversion becoming officially adopted by Universities and the Public Service. Since 1995, handbooks on non-sexist language have been freely available at these institutions as guides for expression.)

The declared rationale of this tyranny is to prevent people being offended; to compel everyone to avoid using words or behavior that may upset homosexuals, women, non-whites, the crippled, the stupid, the fat or the ugly. This reveals not only its absurdity but its inspiration. The set of values that are detested are those held by the previous generation (those who fought the Second World War), which is why the [derogatory terms for the progeny of citizens of foreign national derivation] have become heresy, for, in an act of infantile rebellion, their subjects have become revered by the new generation. Political Correctness is merely the resentment of spoiled children directed against their parents' values.

It (PC) started with a few voices but grew in popularity until it became unwritten and written law within the community. [It has become so imbedded in the modern culture of this country it has become virtual truth; no one dares question it for fear of rejection!] With those who were publicly declared as being not politically correct becoming the object of persecution by the mob, if not prosecution by the state." (Philip Atkinson)

This process was encouraged and helped along by activist judges, themselves products of the education system established by the NEA, another branch organization of the communist movement. These judges began legislating from the bench through decisions based on a system of etymology and language interpretation in their written dissents. Through judicial fiat they established precedences which themselves became de facto law, thereby bypassing the legislative process. The purpose of law had changed to fit the mold. No longer is the judiciary used to dispense justice. Its purpose has become enforcing the order of society.

From Stalinists the PC movement adapted the dictum which was also used in Orwell's "1984;" "what is good for PC is truth what is contrary to or evil toward PC is a lie." Anyone who refuses to acknowledge the "Emperor's New Clothes," are unworthy of their highly esteemed offices. Soon people who refuse will become enemies of the state and must needs to be "retrained" or annihilated.

Progressive education is responsible for what has been referred to as the "dumbing down" of American students. First through the indoctrination of students to the "pass the test" mentality. In the name of equality everyone must be given more than just an equal opportunity, they must be given equal privilege. Every student is taught to learn the answers, then take the test. The idea of independent thinking requires an independent thinker. What about those students who don't have the ability to think as well as others?

Second, through the elimination of certain studies associated with politically incorrectness, namely subjects such as history and civics, other subjects could be introduced to ensure the goals of the agenda. With addition of absolutely inane classes based on politically correct issues such as AIDS awareness and homosexual acceptance, time for vital technical studies for citizens preparing to enter a growing technological centered society have become limited.

The United States lags behind newly developing industrial nations where at one time they lead them, yet the United States spends more money on education than any other nation on the planet. The problem is not poverty, it's the agenda.

The arts were elemental in developing a society of specialization and freedom of choice. Along with the National Education Association, the National Arts Endowment has secured art as a focus of all aspects of education. Almost every field of study has become an "art." Those who follow an art are not students, they're artists. This innovation ushered in a false notion of freedom. If all subjects are art and all students are artists all criticism is subjective and severe or undue criticism (if not censorship) could be applied subjectively to any product of art. (A bucket of urine with a crucifix upside down in it must be accepted in an art show lest a charge of censorship of art be lodged against a gallery).

Hegelian<sup>1</sup> philosophy and Freudian psychology<sup>2</sup> applied to the state and freedom remove "poles" and unite concepts of right and wrong into a socialistic mishmash of nothingness. Add to these the Orwellian system of misspeak or double speak and right became wrong and vice-versa. A "cool demeanor" no longer means uncaring, jaded or callous. It now means "cool" as in excelling in social demeanor.

Behavioral modification removes "societal norms" and replaces them with another subjective judgement of human nature. It uses psychology to trick the person into believing that their behavior is the result of hormones, environment, genetics or any number of exterior influences. Do a few drugs, perform certain systems of behavior, meditate on internal issues and you can overcome the bad feelings and deeds. In this ideology all children are good. It's merely their circumstances that cause their downfall.

Sensitivity training has removed decency and morality by teaching us that there is no major difference between the sexes, and that sexuality and gender are all a matter of personal choice. That is false reasoning, a tiger is a tiger is a tiger by the same token a human is a human is a human they both revert to type without warning.

Values clarification was designed to destroy the evils, so-called, of Victorian morality. It was demanded because it suppressed natural inclinations warping the psyche resulting in dangerous psychoses caused by the twisting of truth into a lie. Children are taught to cast off their parents' out of date values and develop their own. To meet the challenges of a changing philosophical and psychological world they necessarily must adjust their norms. After all, we are a developing society that has evolved past the nineteenth century.

The ushering in of a world wide language of video and cinema has changed mores and morals and has more or less sealed the doom of destruction for modern <sup>1</sup> Hegel developed a comprehensive philosophical framework, or "system", to account in an integrated and developmental way for the relation of mind and nature, the subject and object of knowledge, and psychology, the state, history, art, religion and philosophy. In particular, he developed a concept of mind or spirit that manifested itself in a set of contradictions and oppositions that it ultimately integrated and united, without eliminating either pole or reducing one to the other. Examples of such contradictions include those between nature and freedom, and between immanence and transcendence.

generations; and if it continues, generations to come. Pictures put forth a language that is universal. The viewers may not know the language that accompany the pictures but the pictures are graphic and convey their own message of carnage, pleasure and free intercourse of all sorts between peoples. Most modern psychology denies it; but, “monkey see, monkey do” is a valid observation.

In order to establish the destruction of the core of Western civilization those persons who seek it's destruction do so through the abolition of the Ten Commandments. Strangely enough these same people do so out of the desire to become the arbiters of those same commandments. The reason for this is simple; they believe it's better to be a prince in Hell than a pauper in Heaven.

By destroying Christianity they make it possible for their vision of a messiah to come. They seek a messiah that the Christ wasn't; a world power monger, bent on world domination. But, when this messiah does come, they're going to get a big surprise. This new messiah won't be interested in having them as his generals and commanders. He'll do just what Stalin did to the zealots of communism. He'll have them destroyed. Zealots are only good for as long as you need them. After that, they become a nuisance. Power corrupts absolute power corrupts absolutely! (Lord Acton).

The method is simple; break the culture apart into separate, warring factions, then rebuild each faction in your own image. From this the factions gain unanimity with each other through common ideology. For this very reason we now have a “pluralistic” society which says that all religions are the same, all races are the same, all sexes are the same, all cultures are not the same. We have “African-Americans,” “Latin-Americans” but not “Celtic-Americans” because the western traditions are the enemy, and those traditions are born from white, European men. We have the “innocent” native peoples oppressed by the industrial European descendent colonizers. We have the need for equality in the work place, equality in government, but not equality for religions, or religious expression.

In order for all religions to be the same, all religions must be false. It is only when all religions are equally false that one religion can assert itself based upon false premises. Christianity must therefore be polluted, corrupted and transformed. It must also tell the right narrative; it must become “politically correct.” When this happened, Christianity became toothless.

Union Theological Seminary teaches a twisted form of theology which conjoins Christianity with the government. They teach the Christ not as God, but as the great emancipator. They teach the Christ as the “first progressive.” They put Him into a secular role of freedom fighter. This twisting of the gospel does nothing but further the division between people, between classes, between cultures and ideologies.

The fall of the Roman Empire was due to class separation, moral decay, and multiculturalism. When Christianity entered the Roman world the “old gods” began to die away. This change caused a huge rift between social classes, individuals, and governmental systems. The entire Roman society had been established upon the twelve tablets of law, and those tablets were established by the gods. When their authority over man began to erode, morality began to erode. If Rome had cast out Christianity it may have lasted for another thousand years, but it didn't, because it couldn't. Christianity was Truth. Everyone who encountered the Christ recognized that this was the paragon of human virtue.

However, if Rome had cast out all paganism and embraced Christianity alone, it would have survived to this very day. It didn't. Instead, it attempted to marry the Church with the government, just as the pagan practices had been before it. From this arose a corruption of both government and religion, which caused the fall of Rome.

Our founding fathers warned us about a separation of church and state, but they - in no way whatsoever - inferred that religion should be separated from the state. Rather, they knew that when government and religion conjoin, what results is a true corruption of both. What they knew was that if each individual would embrace the common ideology of Christian principles, then this nation would last forever. Just like Rome before it, this government cannot exist within the framework of multiculturalism and pluralism. The enemies of this state know that, and have used that.

This has all been written. This has all been predicted. The seven church ages speak of the "Jews which say they are Jews, but are the synagogue of Satan." The prophets speak of the end times when there will be one world government, one system of power. The Bible speaks of all these things and tells us everything we need to know about our lives today. Why?

So that God can prove to mankind, the heavenly hosts, and all of the universe that he is God, and that He, and He alone is the reason for life, the meaning of liberty, and the hope of the pursuit of happiness; the very things our founding fathers tried to give us and the very thing we are allowing to be stolen from us.

As long as we fail to embrace our foundations we will fail. If we attempt to cut out the heart and soul of Western Civilization, then we will make a wound that will not heal, and Western culture will die. The genie is out of the bottle; who has the desire to put him back or a better question is who is able? God is able and will bring rebellious mankind to his knees with "a rod of iron." ( see Psalm 2: 9; Revelations 2: 27; 12: 5; 19: 15).

God and only God is our hope of salvation.
